From our Jars & Tins to your Table...

Dish Up
North Carolina's Specialty

Good, from-scratch food has always been part and parcel of the Southern hospitality our area of the country is known for. Whether it’s a finely-rolled Moravian cookie or a mouth-watering cheddar cheese straw with just the right hint of cayenne, such products are specialties that are three and four centuries old.

Products with a cultural history, such as a delicately aged country ham, have paved the way for the new North Carolina specialty food offerings. From smokin’ salsas to candied peanuts, goat cheese to a teriyaki vinaigrette, the flavor and diversity of North Carolina’s kitchens are abundant.

The North Carolina Specialty Foods Association is a dynamic organization serving more than 50 Tar Heel companies. Its mission is to actively encourage and support the promotion and appreciation of the state’s specialty food, beverage and wine products.
